Details of Session (including aim and scope):

At present, universal education has been extended to higher education as well, and various educational systems are helpful for our lifelong learning. With this trend, teacher-centered class should be changed to student-centered class. In other words, they should learn in a positive manner at all levels of education. To achieve such a purpose, smart education centering on e-learning as well as active learning using ICT will play a more important role than ever.

In this session, we define active learning as a learning form that could encourage students to be positive in classes. Therefore, we will welcome any presentations on, for example, educational tools, educational systems, educational environment, teaching methods and evaluation methods, so long as the researches would be related to smart education focusing around active learning using ICT and e-Learning.

The following topics will be welcomed:

Smart Education, Active Learning, ICT-driven Education, e-Learning, Distance Learning, Blended Learning, Problem Based Learning, Collaborative Learning; Practical Examples for Smart Education, Practical Examples for Active Learning, Practical Examples for Problem Based Learning; Academic Portfolio, Teaching Portfolio; Portfolio Systems, Learning Management Systems, Evaluation Systems and Methods; Pedagogical Models, Curriculum Development, Management for General Active Learning Using ICT, Virtual Learning Environments, Learning Objects, Simulations and Modelling, Gaming and Edutainment, Online Groupwork
